The Chicago Approach

Chicago Booth teaches a discipline-based way of looking at the world around you. It will take you deeper into issues, broaden your perspective, and inspire you to challenge assumptions. You'll learn how to think, not what to think. The Chicago Approach empowers you to evaluate problems and opportunities through the fundamental disciplines that underlie all businesses—accounting, economics, statistics, and the behavioral sciences. No matter what your goals are, you have the tools, agility, and approach to realize your possibilities.

Carve Your Own Path

Chicago Booth offers a unique opportunity to tailor your learning experience. We have the most flexible curriculum, so you can design a program that meets your specific goals and interests. Choose from a wide variety of courses, levels, and areas of study.

Leadership Effectiveness and Development (LEAD): Take an introspective approach to management skills, wielding influence, negotiation, team building, self awareness, and communication style (our only required and cohorted course).

Foundation Courses: Focus on developing analytical tools through accounting, microeconomics, and statistics.

Functions, Management, and Business

Environment: Cover core business functions of finance, marketing, and operations while studying the fundamentals of decisions, people, and strategy; and understand the backdrop in which firms operate.

Electives: Pursue any area of study, including up to six classes from other University of Chicago departments.

Concentrations: Booth has 14 concentrations that span a wide range of interests to further focus your studies. Students generally graduate with three to four concentrations, ranging from accounting and finance to marketing and entrepreneurship.

Joint Degree: Go beyond the MBA and develop specialized credentials with a joint degree from the graduate schools of law, medicine, public policy, or social services administration.

International Experience

In addition to various global experiences, we offer many international business opportunities, from a concentration to degree to study abroads in 21 countries around the world.
